

2degrees Partners with The Green Chamber of Commerce

By Ben Carmichael / June 30, 2011

Working to expand the growing community of sustainable businesses in the United States, 2degrees is pleased to announce its partnership with The Green Chamber of Commerce \(GCoC\). The GCoC, a non-profit founded in 2007, is a growing and diverse national business network dedicated to promoting the success of its members, supporting the development of sustainable business practices, and advocating for green public policy.

The partnership provides both parties with the opportunity to bring together qualified business leaders, policy experts, and academics with the goal of accelerating the delivery of solutions to sustainability's most pressing challenges. In pairing with the GCoC, 2degrees further strengthens and expands its rapidly growing community while its members enjoy an increase in resources and information exchange with GCoC and its members on environmental sustainability issues.

The Green Chamber of Commerce is a 501 (c)6 non-profit that was founded in 2007 in the San Francisco Bay Area. The Green Chamber of Commerce is a growing and diverse national business network dedicated to: promoting the success of our members, supporting the development of sustainable business practices, and advocating for green public policy.

2degrees is a global online community of over 12,500 sustainability professionals from over 90 countries. Leveraging the power of this community, it helps its members collaborate, share their successes, and solve practical problems. The community is built upon subject-specific Working Groups that concentrate the right people and knowledge through a suite of tools including webinars, forums, podcasts, document libraries, and virtual roundtables.
